bala vikasa
Helping Communities Help Themselves

SOPAR-Bala Vikasa is a non-profit organization devoted to sustainable development in India. Their approach is to help communities help themselves by providing rural villagers with the tools and resources they need to transform their lives. They also encourage Canadians to get involved with international issues as global citizens. They have been working tirelessly toward these goals since 1977.

They manage a variety of development programs in rural communities in India's South-East regions. All their activities follow a 360° Community Driven Development approach that encourages villagers to engage in their own development process and effect change on multiple levels: social, financial, environmental, physical and psychological. They emphasize the importance of a sense of unity, responsibility and leadership, and equal representation of men and women. They also have people development training center (pdtc), created and maintained in the spirit of service, at Warangal, Telangana (133km from Hyderabad).
