

ETHICS & VALUES IN ADMINISTRATION

Programme Overview

Today we are witnessing far-reaching changes globally in the social and political environment. There is growing awareness in civil society and greater rights-based demands for more open, responsive and accountable governments. The earlier emphasis on 'efficiency' as a criterion for service delivery has been replaced in recent years by 'effectiveness' and more citizen-oriented approaches to service delivery. The framework of efficiency alone is no longer adequate to deal with the pressures and aspirations for change. Systemic corruption along with 'weak governance' has resulted in the misuse of scarce resources, uncertainty of outcomes, failure in achieving objectives and the gradual undermining of institutions.
