

Urban Infrastructure Project Preparation and Management

22-24 Feb, 2018

PROGRAMME OVERVIEW

Projects enable service delivery improvement and in consequence, human development. Project preparation is a key building block in encapsulation of a project and must therefore be carefully done with sufficient rigour and necessary details on inputs, processes, outputs, and outcomes. A project report must also ensure appraisal, approval, and subsequent project implementation in a planned manner. In short, a project report is not a bounded volume of pensées on a sector but a document that has scientific rigour built into it.

On the ground, it is however observed that project reports are hurriedly prepared, consultant driven, and do not stand the test of rigour in the field, particularly during implementation. As well, little or no attention is paid to operational aspects and post-implementation maintenance. As a result, post approval ownership of DPRs is seen as limited.

It is in this context that ASCI is on request of local and state governments conducting a short, three-day capacity development programme on 'Urban Infrastructure Project Preparation and Management'. The programme lends special focus on key sectors under flagship programmes of MoHUA (Smart Cities, AMRUT, PMAY, HRIDAY). Besides, the programme shall pragmatically demonstrate to participants state-of-the-art techniques in project monitoring and management.
