In 2015 a new global agenda for eradicating poverty, inequality and injustice by 2030 was adopted unanimously by all the Member States of the United Nations. The focus of Agenda 2030 (Sustainable Development Goals) is to facilitate countries design and develop action plans to charter a path of growth which is rights-based, inclusive, transformational and sustainable. Gender is a cross cutting theme in all the 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDG). The programme has been designed for officers associated with planning, monitoring and evaluation from central and state ministries, officers from Gender Budget Cell, representatives of NGOs responsible for budgeting, evaluation and reporting on social sector.

Sustainable Development Goals and Gender Budgeting

(February 17 - 19, 2020)

PROGRAMME OVERVIEW

In 2015 a new global agenda for eradicating poverty, inequality and injustice by 2030 was adopted unanimously by all the Member States of the United Nations. The focus of Agenda 2030 (Sustainable Development Goals) is to facilitate countries design and develop action plans to charter a path of growth which is rights-based, inclusive, transformational and sustainable.

Gender is a cross cutting theme in all the 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDG). While there is a stand alone goal on gender equality (SDG 5); there are several other targets in the 17 SDGs which recognize women's empowerment as both an objective as well as part of the solution. According to Nobel Laureate Amartya Sen, gender inequality is a collection of disparate and interlinked problems hence achieving gender equality would mean to adopt a holistic approach to enhance the capabilities of all girls and women which not only enhances their freedom and well-being but also has a positive impact on the lives of others.

The building blocks of such transformatory change calls for: review process with a strong gender segregated data base (which boosts public service delivery and makes governments more responsive); effective monitoring and evaluation system (to assess performance of social policies and programmes, support data-driven decision-making and ensure accountability, transparency and good governance) and gender responsive budgeting.
